

CAPITAL MARKETS & DEBT PLACEMENT STRATEGIC PLAYBOOK

Loan Origination Cold Call & Pitch Playbook

Refined communication structure, objection handlers, and frictionless conversion assets.

1. Pitch Angle Frameworks

OPTION 1: DIRECT NUMBERS PITCH

"My incentives are simple: I only make money if we actually get your deal funded on terms that beat what you have. Let me send you a quick sheet showing where the numbers and rates sit today. What is the best email for you?"

OPTION 2: BENCHMARK PITCH (ZERO PRESSURE)

"I am not asking for a commitment right now. Let me send over a clean breakdown showing what we can price this at compared to other lenders. If the math works, great. If not, at least you have a real comparison. Where should I email that?"

OPTION 3: PLAIN-ENGLISH ALIGNED PITCH

"If I cannot bring you better terms, higher proceeds, or an easier path to close, we do not expect your business. Let me shoot over a simple one-page breakdown so you can judge the math yourself. What email works best?"

2. 30-Second Verbatim Cold Call

Hey [Name], I will be brief. I know I am calling out of the blue.

I work on the lending side, and the reason for the call is simple: we are funding deals right now where we are consistently beating existing debt terms and finding better capital structures.

I am not asking you to commit to anything today. My model is simple: I only get paid if we actually deliver numbers that beat what you currently have on the table.

Let me email you a clean, one-page breakdown showing where our pricing and terms sit today so you have a live benchmark to compare against.

What is the best email to send that to?

Timeline	Phase	Strategic Goal
0 to 5s	Permission & Disarm	Acknowledge the interruption to lower guard immediately.
6 to 15s	Core Value	State exact capability: beating terms and structure.
16 to 23s	Aligned Hook	State contingent, success-only model in plain English.

Timeline	Phase	Strategic Goal
24 to 30s	Frictionless Close	Ask for the destination email, not a commitment.

3. Core Pushback & Objection Handling

Objection: "We are all set / We already have a lender."

"Completely understand, and most firms we work with do. The reason I am reaching out is just to give you a live price check. If your current lender is still better, at least you keep them honest. If our math beats theirs, you have another option on the table. What is the best email to send that benchmark to?"

Objection: "Just email me some information."

"Happy to do that. Rather than blasting you with generic marketing decks you will never read, what is the main number you care about most right now: rate, loan size, or speed to close? I will send just that one-page breakdown. What address works best?"

Objection: "What are your rates?"

"It depends on the asset and the structure, but we are actively beating market averages on spread and flexibility right now. If you tell me the rough size of the deal or the debt you have in place, I can email you an exact pricing sheet in ten minutes. What is your email?"

4. Execution & Operating Rules

- Never ask for trust: Borrowers trust transparent numbers and clean term sheets.
- Sell the inbox delivery, not the loan: Close for the email address, not the deal.
- Validate before pivoting: Always acknowledge pushback with 'Completely understand' before reframing.
- Always end on the destination ask: Never finish an objection response on a statement.
